PROMOTING WORLD CITIZENSHIP THROUGH SOCIAL RELATIONS¹
GOODWIN WATSON

Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York

The ideal of world citizenship is as ancient and honored as the noblest words of men. "My country is the world; my countrymen are mankind," said William Lloyd Garrison in 1830. Still earlier, Thomas Paine, pamphleteer of our American Revolution, chose as his motto: "My country is the world, and my religion is to do good." Diogenes, when asked, said, "I am a citizen of the world," and Socrates also asserted that he was neither an Athenian nor a Greek, but a citizen of the world. Full seven centuries before Christ the most majestic of the prophets, Isaiah of Jerusalem, expressed his vision of the latter days, when

" . . . the mountain of Yahweh's house shall be established
On the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills
And nations shall flow into it. . . .
And He will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples;
And they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks;
Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

For more than two thousand years, enlightened men have sought an international civilization, which only makes more incredible our current catastrophes. Chinese official figures indicate more civilians killed in the recent bombing of Canton alone than there were American soldiers killed in battle during the entire American Revolution to which our histories give so much discussion. In every land they long for peace, but now

With agonized incredible suspense,
No opiate can calm the mad despair,
As war swoops everywhere."²

What a grotesque exhibit it would be for our World's Fair to assemble Hitler and Goering, Mussolini and Franco, and the Japanese General Staff under a banner reading, "The meek shall inherit the earth!"

¹Address delivered before a general session of the National Education Association, New York, June 28, 1938.

²Laidlaw, Louise Burton, "Valor" North American Review, Spring, 1938.

Our Christian beliefs revere the sacredness of life, but church officials bless rebel bombers who shatter towns, homes, and the bodies of men, women, and children. Since the waning of feudalism, the rising movements of international trade, international communication, of international science, art, and religion have united us increasingly in a world community, but now a new gospel of nationalism and autarchy limits the loyalties of youth to a single nation, empire, or race.

We cannot escape bewilderment and profound dismay. What has gone wrong? Why have centuries of aspiration and generations of education left us so far from any real world citizenship? Must we abandon the world citizenship ideal as hopelessly Utopian, sentimental, and out of accord with basic human nature? Should we teach instead, an aggressive American nationalism or a defeatist resignation?

It is a tribute to strength of character that American educators have faltered so little in their faith. Educators must live in the insistent immediate but with an understanding founded on a much longer span of human history. We know that the long-time trend is toward international accord, despite the reverses of recent years. Science had not paid in the past, and will not pay in the future, much attention to the nationality of the research worker. A national culture which attempts to exclude the art or the music of other peoples only impoverishes itself. National religions and tribal gods must be, in this century, evanescent anachronisms. Even where national antagonism has erected most invincible barriers, trade finds a way. Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia still count each other best customers. The League of Nations is only a shell of what Lord Cecil and Woodrow Wilson meant it to be but Wilson and Cecil were moving with, not against, the tides of history. Even in its present enfeebled condition, the League is, as Mowrer has said, "the product of a thousand years of slow ethical growth. . . . It speaks for a much larger proportion of the world than any other human institution." The weakness of the League has been not so much in its machinery as in the reluctance of first the United States and more recently the Fascist powers, to use that machinery.

The League technical staff continuously renders valuable services to world coöperation. Some forty international disputes have come before the League since 1920, and the great majority have been peacefully adjusted. The assistance of the League to refugees, regulation of international waterways, plans to check disease epidemics, control of drug traffic, contributions to child welfare, and activities of intellectual coöperation are achievements of considerable importance to the world community. The International Labor Organization, now headed by former Governor Winant, has obtained hundreds of ratifications of important agreements in the interest of fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women, and children. Let us not cry out in despair that our effort has been in vain.

The treaty of Versailles had its iniquitous defects, and the world is paying bitterly for them; but John Gunther reminds us that before the World War, some forty-five million people lived under foreign domination while the peace treaty with its theory of self-determination reduced this ethnic subjection to less than seventeen million. Historians look back only a short one hundred fifty years to the separate American colonies when Patrick Henry's statement, "I am not a Virginian but an American," sounded as extreme as would to-day the assertion of world citizenship ahead of Americanism. The family of nations known as the British Empire represents a notable step toward international coöperation, despite the fact that Chamberlain and his Tory government seem to be involved in a benighted front with Hitler and Mussolini.

One of the most notable international achievements of our generation is the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Whatever our opinion as to the wisdom of its economic structure or the democracy of the Stalin regime, we should not fail to recognize that the U. S. S. R. is not a single nation but an alliance of eleven more or less autonomous republics, including one hundred eighty peoples, speaking one hundred fifty languages. The attempt to grant to each of these minority nationalities the preservation and development of its own language, culture, and institutions with laws to punish any exercise of race discrimination, sets another bench mark for the history of coöperation among peoples.

Examples of progress toward world citizenship do not often make headlines. Perhaps we should be encouraged that the militarization and nationalization of youth in some countries is regarded as news, whereas efforts toward preparing youth to live in a world community can be taken for granted. Within the last few days, I came across a report of an article by the Swiss educator M. Jaquet, urging the schools of his land to "proclaim the value of principles which are common to all humanity and not merely to the Swiss." In every community in America, it would be possible to find some parents, some ministers, and some teachers who are, day after day, encouraging the ideal and the practice of brotherhood, with conscious effort to include all peoples of the earth. A poll of the students in a great midwestern high school a few weeks ago showed seventy-eight per cent in favor of working coöperatively with other nations, rather than attempting national isolation.

The ideal of world citizenship need not be abandoned; the stars in their courses fight against excessive provincialism, sectionalism, and nationalism. Yet there must have been some basic error in the efforts of the past generation of educators. Rising armament appropriations in every country bear burdensome evidence of failure. Teachers in several European countries have had to begin instructing children how to put on gas masks to avoid strangulation and how to reach an underground cave when the sirens blow.

In a profound world crisis, moving daily nearer war, educators are forced to earnest self-criticism. Where has been our mistake? What do we lack?

We have shown children picture books of quaint African children, but that has not helped Ethiopia.

We have put on pageants with gay kimonos against a background of cherryblossoms, but our relations with Japan are not improving.

We have collected foreign stamps, we have learned folk songs and folk dances of other nations, we have even exchanged letters with children abroad; but the prevailing attitude seems to be suspicion of foreign ideas and support of campaigns to "buy American."

We have shown the horrors of war, as in the impressive "short" from the film Broken Lullaby, edited by the Commission on Human Relations of the Progressive Education Association; but many of our youth look forward, with a sense of vague excitement and even anticipation, to enlisting in some new military crusade under the Stars and Stripes.

Good educational practice to-day calls for diagnosis before treatment. We must analyze the problem carefully before recommending remedial activities. Homes, schools, churches, and youth organizations have expended considerable ingenuity and strenuous efforts on education for world citizenship, with dismaying lack of success.

Perhaps we have been attacking the wrong phase of the problem. Maybe the obstacles to world peace to-day are not of a sort that will be overcome by more and more of the same kind of activities we have encouraged in the past. Perhaps if we look closely at some of the apparent failures, we can get a clue to a more adequate attack. Once we are clear about the basic problems, then we shall have criteria for judging the social relations which help or hinder.

Let us face a series of questions and contradictions and see whether we can discover beneath the surface of events the forces that now thwart our sincere desire for peace and coöperation.

1. Why do we build battleships instead of new homes? If a third of our people are inadequately housed, why is it that, according to the Fortune survey, increase in armament is the most popular spending that the New Deal has made?

2. Why is it that with the American people warmly sympathetic with China in her present distress, American business furnishes the oil, scrap iron, steel, and cotton to sustain Japan in the deplorable murderous assault? Why was the official American Red Cross campaign to aid Chinese civilians so faint-hearted, and so poorly supported—raising less than a third of its quota after six months?

3. Why did Wilson's dream of a democratic world state bog down in stubborn nationalism, tariff barriers, economic depressions, and aggressive dictatorships?

4. Why did we in 1928, as a world power with our farms and factories selling to world markets, set up prohibitive tariff walls against the advice of practically all our economists, leading other countries to inevitable reprisals against us which have cost us much of our world trade and destroyed our prosperity?

5. Why is it that although we, the people of the United States to-day, as sampled in representative polls, strongly favor a referendum on war, the Congress and the President decide with vigor that it would not be good for us to exercise such discretion?

Similar problems can be found in the foreign relations of other democratic powers.

Back in the days of the German Republic, the people of Austria voted overwhelmingly for Anschluss with Germany, but France and England refused to consider the idea. Hitler's absorption of Austria could hardly have seemed more attractive to the people of France and England, but Hitler's action is now unopposed by the governments of both France and England. Why?²

The people of England, as well as the people of America were enraged over the grabbing of Abyssinia, but America furnished the oil which Mussolini needed, and England, which could so easily have closed the Suez Canal, granted Italy the thoroughfare for conquest. Why?

The people of France and England appear to have an overwhelming sympathy with the Loyalist Government in Spain, but the official action of France and England has been to blockade the Loyalists while permitting a steady flow of troops and supplies to the Rebels. To-day, the British Foreign Office is so eager for accord with Hitler and Mussolini, neither of whom is very popular in the hearts of the British, that Loyalist Spain must be sacrificed and France, tied to Britain, must agree. Why?

Sweden has become almost a synonym, in this country, for coöperation, social intelligence, and world peace, but Swedish prosperity now rests on making arms for the rest of Europe; and we learn with regret that as Japan nears exhaustion of her gold and credit, the attack on China is extended by a large grant of credit to Japan from the great engineering syndicate SKF of Sweden. Why?

Or, to come back again, very close home, why does the International Number of the World's Fair Bulletin, which recently came to my attention, play up the announcement that Colombia, Cuba, Great Britain, Holland, Italy, Japan, and Venezuela are to send warships, naval vessels and fighting planes, as part of their exhibit? Groups representing education and various social sciences have found it impossible to arrange exhibitions in what Grover Whalen calls "the greatest single institution of learning ever conceived" while seventy thousand square feet have been allotted for Japanese propaganda and one hundred ten thousand square feet with a million-dollar investment for Fascist Italy. Why?

Such questions as these leave us bewildered. Are we all crazy? Or is there method in all this madness? Can we find any principle of explanation?

One fact stands out through all our confusing problems. The will of the people to peace is consistently distorted and deflected by the actions of rulers. Economic and political power does not act in accord with the desires or the best interests of the masses of citizens who desire peace and world coöperation. In each issue: new homes versus battleships; protection of China versus sales to Japan; the ideal of a world state versus failure of the League; our world trade versus short-sighted manufacturing interests demanding high tariffs; popular referenda versus State Department diplomacy; Anschluss with Socialists versus Anschluss with Nazis; protection of Ethiopia versus sales to Italy; democratic bonds with the Spanish people versus business preference for facism rather than socialism; and a World's Fair expressing social vision versus one expressing the profit-seeking of financing and controlling groups—the real interests of the people have been defeated by those at the posts of control in business and government.

All of our illustrations were chosen, by design from the actions of the great democratic nations. The evidence is only too clear. Despite the longing of the people for peace, and despite many fine phrases from statesmen, the acts of the regime tend to keep old wars going and to start new ones. Nowhere is it more important for pupils to learn to distinguish words from deeds than in international affairs. Business and government almost invariably act in concert on international questions, even when in conflict on internal affairs. Both business and government seek added power, and war, at least temporarily, boosts profits and enlarges powers. No one wants war, of course, but war does not mean to the dictators of wealth and government what it does to working men, their wives, and children. The peace of the world is imperiled not by any innate blood lust in the common man, but by the working customs and relationships among the groups of our society.

Now this is what our citizens have not seen. We gladly renounce war as a national policy, but we hold with passionate fervor to all of the institutions and operations which step by step lead to war. Rare is the person who defends modern war as a social goal, but still rarer the person who does not defend the social means which result in war and aggression.

The speaker who decries all isms as foreign to America, and says we want none of them, is usually one hundred per cent in favor of the most dangerous isms of the modern world: nationalism, chauvinism, imperialism, finance capitalism, opportunism, and militarism. Those are what he means by Americanism. We have been brought up to accept a set of ideals and also a set of means which defeat those ideals. Loyalty to the existing social and political means which exacerbate international conflict is regrettably stronger than our loyalty to the ends of world citizenship. We might paraphrase an old quotation to say, "I care not who determines the ends of a nation, if I may determine its means." The means direct the course of the action, the ends usually serve only to rationalize or sentimentalize the means.

Now are we ready to re-state our problem of promoting world citizenship? The trouble has not been lack of interest in peace or world coöperation. The trouble has been a failure to see and to affirm the difficult means by which alone the widespread desire for peace can be made effective in the modern world. There is a high price to be paid for peace. Educators and other molders of public opinion have not clearly stated that price. In consequence, the citizens of most countries to-day see their hope for peace waning. They thought to have peace for the asking, and world citizenship by means of convention speeches. They had no notion of paying any such price as change in their own economic, political, and cultural policies. In the words of Jeremiah, "They have healed the hurt of our people lightly, crying, 'peace, peace,' where there is no peace."

There is no cost-free pathway to world coöperation. The price is change in basic social relations. So long as power to control business and government rests with our present small, reactionary ruling class, we must expect enormous discrepancy between ideals of world peace and actions taken far more with a view to profits. The dominant economic groups even in democratic nations prefer to aid Fascist aggressors, because the alternative is a threat to their own prosperity and power. Desperate, the panic-stricken corporations, unable to employ the workers of America, unable to produce profitably the potential plenty which the people increasingly demand, will, of course, use our government to help them secure business abroad, and to help defeat "dangerous" ideas of industrial democracy. While American financial interests remain in power and in peril, schools may talk about world coöperation pretty much in vain.

The World's Fair illustrates beautifully our world problem on a small and comprehensible scale. In a time like this, when mechanical progress has far outrun social adaptation, the attention of the intellectual world turns to social sciences. But not the World's Fair. It promises to be ballyhoo for business, a coming to gigantic life of the advertisements in expensive magazines. We may object. As educators we regret the lack of interest in education except as some manufacturer of school supplies may be induced to advertise education incidental to his wares. Now what shall we do? Where is the root of the problem? Is it a lack of social ideals on the part of the common people? For answer, look to the official World's Fair leaders. What sort of social ideals would you expect from men famous as America's sixty ruling families?

Now it is one thing to complain about the neglect of education and of social research by the Fair, but quite a different kettle of fish to take control away from that kind of group. Transfer of control from privileged reactionaries to the progressive democratic forces of the nation is what we must understand to be the price of world coöperation in Fairs or Affairs. It is no good grumbling over the bitter defeat of our ideals, if we are unwilling to implement our purposes. More education in appreciation of world coöperation and in praise of peace will get us only deeper into the present contradiction between ideals and realities. Either we face up to the cost of changing social relations, traditional prejudices and perquisites, and building new loyalties, or we resign ourselves to helplessness in the world's distress. The old crowd in power will surely move along the old lines, to the same old disasters. Promoting world citizenship means really establishing new, more progressive, more democratic, and more socialized controls within our own economic and political life.

We cannot save democracy in the world unless we can save it at home. We cannot make our foreign policy express our desire for peace, unless we can make government more responsive to the will of the great majority of our people who have no great wealth or political pull. We cannot make government more democratic so long as economic power, and the power to pay for propaganda which molds public opinion are concentrated in the hands of the few. Our government, and that of France and England, may pretend to be democracies, but they are in truth plutocracies. It is no hyperbole of the radical demagogue to assert that Mr. Millionbucks has at present an influence on legislative, executive, and judicial action which the man in the street, of equal or higher ability, cannot hope to have. The foreign policies of plutocracies will seldom advance peace and world coöperation. In the present economic crisis, foreign policies of all capitalist nations, will necessarily be far more concerned to keep plutocrats in power than to build world democracy.

This predicament defines our educational task. It is proving more difficult than we had imagined. The social relations which permit world citizenship do not now exist and cannot be set up except in place of social relationships which now protect the power of the few. We can eulogize world peace without serious opposition, but we cannot create the necessary conditions for world peace without finding ourselves participants in the most intense and bitter struggle of our epoch. So long as we propose only remote ideals, or even the kind of practical measures which do not greatly affect the balance of power between the few and many, we shall be undisturbed and ineffective. To get results, in building world citizenship, means to change social relations in the direction of greater opportunity for the mass of mankind.

Teachers like to think in terms of what can be done in a given class, in a given school, and in a given community. This is a sound impulse; it helps us to keep our feet on the ground. The usual error is to attempt to find some little analogy between classroom and nation. Since war is so disastrous, some teachers have directed their efforts by analogy against fights on the playground or against symbols like toy soldiers and popguns. So we miss the heart of the problem which does exist in every community and which does find expression in the curriculum of every child. Let us go from the great world problems to the life of our schools, not by analogy but by analysis. We have seen that the interests of the many, who long for peace, find no fruition in the policies of business and government, controlled by the few. That contradiction in control, we can study in any local situation. Every teacher works in a community in which the social relations reflect on a small scale the defects which entangle us against our will on the war-making side in world affairs. Has it not too frequently been true in every community that decisions are made by politicians, by men of wealth and influence, and by chambers of commerce, contrary to the wishes of the rank and file of common working citizens? Yet which alliance is more commonly sought by educators: membership of the superintendent of schools in the Rotary Club which represents the privileged few (often in a mellow and benevolent mood), or membership of the teachers in the labor movement which represents actually millions of citizens and potentially almost all of us? The schools seem already to have taken sides—the wrong side. Again, consider the newspapers and magazines that serve our local communities. Whose interests do they serve? Precious little democracy or world citizenship will be promoted in Chicago Tribune territory, for example, except by those few educators who enable a few pupils to take a critical stand against the barrage of propaganda for Toryism, imperialism, chauvinism, and militarism. Only when some of our great newspapers and radios, like our schools, are under the control of the public and not under the control of private owners and large advertisers, may we expect consistent support in efforts for democratic coöperation with all peoples of the world.

Let us review the argument in simple assertions.

Over many centuries, the world has moved slowly toward greater international coöperation. To-day, we seem to be moving in the opposite direction, and dangerously near to war. The reason is not that the masses have lost their desire for world peace, but that small ruling groups in business and government act to defeat the interests of the many. To get world citizenship, we must first have governments which act in full accord with the desire of the people. To get governments which act in full accord with the desire of the masses of mankind, economic power must first be transferred from the organized few to the organized many, from the owners of industry, to all the citizens, or the consumers, or to all who work with brain or brawn. We cannot move from plutocracy to democracy politically unless we first do so in our economic institutions. Changes in social relations and social attitudes which must precede any important steps toward democracy are matters of education. They are matters of education not only in broad questions of national policy, but they come right down into every community to the relations of farm owner and tenant, of housewife and household help, of banker and debtor, of businessman and laborer, of publisher and public, of consumer and storekeeper, of rising groups challenging the old power groups which still seek to preserve precarious privileges.

Reasoning not by analogy, but by analysis of the social forces, we have come a long step from world problems down to the way things are actually run in our own schools and in our home towns. We see the same kind of forces at work in complex international treaties and in our hometown papers. We make the big jump from the class of people represented by our school boards, to influences which tie the hands of the League of Nations. Herbert Hoover returning from Europe reported fourteen Fascist nations, with two hundred forty million people, but our attack on dictatorship begins by organizing farm hands, truck drivers, office clerks, housemaids, news reporters, and school teachers to repel a tyranny closer at hand. The impotence of America in enforcing economic sanctions, which she could so easily and so powerfully have employed against aggressor nations, is only a cumulative consequence of our failure in local communities to overthrow plutocracy and bossism, by enlightened, organized, militant democracy.

Changing our present social institutions to more democratic ones seems, perhaps, a slow procedure to advocate, with the fuse of war explosion already sputtering. Organizing consumers, organizing labor unions, organizing political movements precinct by precinct, may seem to be a forsaking of urgent international problems. How much more satisfying if we could throw out some grand gesture! We might affirm the Kellogg Pact, but it would be evaded by a trickery of words. Japan has done so. We might propose a bill to take the profits out of war, but a Congressional committee would promptly eviscerate it in obedience to those who live by and for profits. All such bills that matter have been safely put away. We might sound a call for a referendum on war, but paid propagandists would quickly stir the American pulse to beat to drums and bugles. It has been done before. We might call for a quarantine upon aggressors, but would we look to governments which have already failed to use the power they undoubtedly had? We might rise and repeat the Oxford pledge, but are we ready to hand over rule of mankind to the ruthless terrorist?

Instead of any dramatic gesture, we have chosen instead, in accord with educational ideals, to lay a solid foundation of greater understanding and more genuine democracy. We are putting our shoulders along side our fellow-workers in other fields against the door of history. That door is already ajar and we catch a gleam of a land beyond, where fellowship, brotherhood, and comradeship shall be virile realities.

NEWS ITEMS

SEX STUDY TABOO IN JUNIOR HIGH.—Sex education will not explore the problem of reproduction beyond the level of insects, flowers, and birds in the junior high schools of New York City.

TEACHERS KEEP FIT BY CITY'S COURSES.—Because the school curriculum is ever changing, the school board of New York City has set up free classes of instruction after school to keep its teachers alert.

SPECIAL EDUCATION URGED FOR THE BRIGHTEST PUPILS.—Edward L. Thorndike, of Teachers College, Columbia University, proposes that scholarships providing free tuition should be extended to include part or all maintenance.

LANSING SCHOOLS STRESS CHARACTER EDUCATION.—Character education has become a vital part of the curriculum of the Lansing public schools, Lansing, Michigan. Courses in honesty, trustworthiness, temperance, and other desirable qualities are stressed from the kindergarten to high-school graduation.

"OMNIBUS" WORDS IN CLASSROOM SCORED.—Roma Gans, of Teachers College, Columbia University, insists that teachers should try to discover the meanings of some of the "omnibus" words they use in the classroom, such as "community planning," "cooperative study," "integrated program," etc. These words need to be interpreted to be meaningful.

GEOGRAPHY TAUGHT BY JIGSAW METHOD.—An invention which will stimulate the study of geography was contributed by Ralph H. Wilson, vice chairman of the Davidson County, North Carolina Board of Education, in the form of a jigsaw puzzle map of North Carolina. It shows the political subdivisions, the one hundred counties, county seats, lakes, rivers, mountain ranges, and sounds.

DEMOCRACY VITAL TO CHILDREN.—Only in a democracy can we consider the individuality of the child, Arnold Gesell, of Yale University, declares; and Frank J. O'Brien, director of the Bureau of Child Guidance of the Board of Education of New York, urges educators to adopt the attitude of doctors and nurses of diagnosing and understanding the child before trying to teach him.

CHILDREN WITH I. Q. ABOVE 150 may be too smart for their own good. The most fortunate range of intelligence from the standpoint of personal happiness is from 130 I. Q. to 150 I. Q. Those children with an I. Q. above this limit find themselves outcasts among those of their own age, and they develop a feeling of physical and social inferiority to older children whom their mental tastes demand.

"EYE" LIGHTING FOR GLENCOE'S NEW HIGH SCHOOL.—The new high school at Glencoe, Illinois, will have a controlled lighting system, new to this part of the country. When natural light fails through dusk or cloudiness, illumination thermostats automatically will turn on room lights. This device will be an economy, it is thought, for lights are often turned on during a cloudy morning and left on throughout the day.

NEW EXPERIMENTS IN KANSAS HIGH SCHOOL.—There has always been dissatisfaction with debate work in high schools, and many schools are trying to find a substitute for debate. Kansas is trying an interesting experiment in a discussion conference. Any high school in the state may send representatives. The students who attend the conference are divided into groups of six. These six students meet together in a semicircle with the leader, who starts the discussion.

DR. DODDS SKEPTICAL ON SOCIAL SCIENCES.—Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University, states that the so-called social sciences are not sciences, if we were to compare them with the natural sciences. He says that scientific research has not helped the man on the street in deciding how he should cast his vote, nor has it given an objective answer to such problems as the depression, nationalism versus internationalism, the future effects of the Munich Pact, etc.

PERMANENT STAFF AND BETTER FACILITIES FOR GROWNUPS SUGGESTED.—Since 1934, the evening and day classes of the New York City schools have grown from 23,311 to 40,852. Because of the influx of refugees and the rise of new problems, it is held that the evening classes should be smaller, more teachers allotted, and the studies revised. It is proposed that the formation of continuous all-day schools for adults would be of benefit to all the students and to the community.

APPRECIATION OF VALUES PUT FIRST.—Harry Kelso Eversull, president of Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio, declares that the appreciation of values is the fundamental aim of the entire education process. He says, "One's appreciation of values determines the nature and character of his ideals and the levels of his morals. Ideals, like values, do not exist save only as they dwell in persons or in things. When we observe truth, beauty, and goodness personified in some individual, or embodied in some human relationship, they become for us an ideal."

COOPERATION BETWEEN CHURCH AND SCHOOL.—Barrett Lowe, superintendent of schools, Wessington Springs, South Dakota, believes that cooperation between school and church reaps valuable rewards to all involved—the student, the church, the home, and the community. "No one," he says, "can call himself educated who has not developed the spiritual phases of his personality. Nor can one call himself educated who has not developed a reasonably satisfying and constructive philosophy of life. In the development of this philosophy, religion plays perhaps the most important part."

A FALLACY TAKEN FOR GRANTED.—That "bright" children take care of themselves has too often been taken for granted. Unfortunately, they, too, are subject to personality and social maladjustments, Benjamin B. Greenberg, assistant superintendent of the New York City schools, points out. The following are a few examples he gives, illustrating maladjustments: "Some, we have found, develop protective deafness as an escape from intolerable boredom of drill; some become truants; some come into serious conflict with teachers and develop a definite antagonism to school as they experience it."

TO FORMULATE CHILDREN'S STANDARDS FOR JUDGING FILMS.—The National Education Association, at its last convention, voted unanimously to (1) develop new units of classroom instruction in the critical appreciation of motion pictures in all secondary subjects from the junior high school to the junior college; (2) to formulate children's standards for judging movies; (3) to evolve methods for teaching motion-picture standards; (4) to cooperate with theaters and community committees in an effort to unify programs and to suggest suitable programs for the family; (5) to oppose legislation which attempts to solve the cinema problem by artificial censorship; (6) to publish lists of films worthy of discussion at various levels, from the junior high school to the junior college.

HIGH-SCHOOL CLASS BUILDS A $5,500 HOME.—The Champaign Senior High School, Champaign, Illinois, house project vocational building trades class is considered unique. This class was planned and carried through by a committee made up not only of members of the school staff but also of the labor or employee groups, contractor or employer groups, and the city administrator or consumer groups. The board of education bought a lot and decided that the value of a home to be built should be five thousand dollars. Then the architectural drawing class studied the site to determine the type of house which would fit the best, and submitted their plans to a committee of judges. A blueprint was made of the plan selected, and the house was begun by forty students under supervision. When the house was completed, the girls in the home problems class took the house over, cleaned it, studied it from the home decorator's point of view, furnished it, and opened it for inspection.

BOOK NOTES

BOOK NOTICES

WINANS, JAMES A. Speech Making. New York: D. Appleton-Century Company, 1938. Pp. viii+487. $2.50.

Selecting a subject, gathering materials, analyzing and briefing, planning the speech, creating interest, and the speaker himself are among the topics discussed by Mr. Winans. Problems of voice and speech comprise the content of one chapter, which is the work of Charles K. Thomas.

NASH, JAY B. Teachable Moments. New York: A. S. Barnes & Company, 1938. Pp. x+243. $1.50.

Sleep, rest, and simple foods are the three essentials stressed by the author as belonging to the correct pattern of health and happiness both of children and adults. He would have teachers renovate present methods of teaching hygiene to include more of the simple things and less of the so-called facts which have no scientific basis, and he would destroy the spell of clever advertising which says, "Eat this, eat that; do this, do that."

The Federal Government and Education. The Advisory Committee on Education. Washington, D. C.: U. S. Government Printing Office. Pp. 31. Limited quantities available on application from the Advisory Committee on Education; larger quantities, 10 cents each, from Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

A summary of the Report of the Advisory Committee, submitted to President Roosevelt and Congress last spring, the pamphlet includes a representation of the inequalities of educational opportunity in the various states, showing that some states spend over one hundred fifteen dollars annually for each public school pupil, while others spend less than thirty dollars. To alleviate this situation, the Advisory Committee, appointed by President Roosevelt, has recommended a six-year program of Federal grants-in-aid to the states. Details of this program are herein made available.

JOHNSON, IVAN ROY; COWAN, ESTHER MARSHALL; and PEACOCK, MARY SAFORD. Study and Appreciation of the Short Story. New York: Silver Burdett Company, 1938. Pp. lxxxi+398. $1.40.

Twenty-nine representative short stories by master storytellers: Edgar Allan Poe, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Robert Louis Stevenson, Guy de Maupassant, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, O. Henry, and others. An introductory section, "The Art of the Short Story," comprising simple and essential information about the short story and the way it is built, adds greatly to the value of the book for use as a text or as a guide to supplementary reading.

WRINKLE, WILLIAM L. The New High School in the Making. New York: American Book Company, 1938. Pp. ix+318.

Subtitled "The Philosophy and Practice of a Modernized Secondary School," the book gives concrete expression to the realization of a new program in the Secondary School of Colorado State College of Education, of which the author is director. Therefore, practice rather than theory is emphasized. Discussion includes: common sense in education, social studies, language activities, the arts, science, mathematics, music, guidance, teacher education for the new school.

Education for American Life. Inquiry of the Regents of the University of the State of New York. New York: McGraw-Hill Company, 1938. Pp. xvii+167. $3.00.

Subtitled "A New Program for the State of New York," the volume comprises, in Part I, a summary of the findings and recommendations of the Regents' Inquiry, which includes discussions on growing schools for a growing world, the schools of New York State wants, and a new educational program; district organization, the State Education Department, and costs are discussed in Part II. Prefatory comment states that "This entire program rests solidly on experience in the State of New York and is presented, not as a final word, but as a point of departure for discussion and action. For the benefit of those who wish to pursue the study further, the titles of ten supporting volumes embodying suggestions of the staff of the Inquiry are listed."
